Music as part of a broad and balanced curriculum

- The benefits of learning music are well documented and extend far beyond music's unique cultural and artistic value.
- Taking part in music develops lifelong learning skills, promotes teamwork and brings social benefits for all those who take part.
- Creative work in music improves self-esteem and provides tools for increasing emotional literacy.
- Research shows that learning a musical instrument changes the shape and power of the brain, developing cognitive skills that can improve attainment, achievement and confidence

The new National Plan for Music Education sets out expectations for school's in their leadership and delivery of music in their school, as set out in their school music education plan. This should include every child having the opportunity to learn music through a progressive music curriculum; take part in choirs and ensembles; and learn to play an instrument.

Music activities for schools in 2023-24 will be delivered through three key strategies:

Instrumental and Vocal Tuition – progression routes for every child	3
Curriculum and Whole Class Instrumental Teaching – a broad and varied classroom music experience	6
Co-Curricular Activities – enriching learning beyond the classroom	10

Southampton Music Services is ready to work in partnership with your school to provide an exciting year of music – inspiring learning and bringing the benefits of music to every child, family and community

Resources to support your curriculum – new for 2023

New for 2023, Southampton Music Services can provide resources to support the delivery of your school's music curriculum. This includes a brand new rap and literacy curriculum; world music tour; plans for year 5 and 6; and more.

Whole Class Instrumental Teaching

All schools should deliver a progressive music curriculum. Whole class or large group teaching should fit into this curriculum and the design of the curriculum will be different in each school. Whole Class Instrumental Teaching can be linked to provide affordable progression routes.

All Whole Class Instrumental Teaching projects include:

To ensure successful delivery, we ask schools to provide:

- adequate space for 30 children to play a musical instrument
- a teaching space with an interactive whiteboard, laptop and speakers
- support from a classroom teacher or teaching assistant for every session
- your behaviour policy
- details of children with additional needs that we need to provide for
- consideration of the progression routes for pupils learning an instrument following their whole class instrumental provision outlined in your school music education plan

We are also able to provide additional first access programmes for other year groups, as well as additional class sets of instruments to support schools in delivery of whole class music teaching.
